Empowering businesses, groups & individuals by connecting the dots to create a blueprint for success!

Become that person that others are compelled to follow

With an undergraduate degree in Psychology, post graduate work in business, certification as both a behavioral analyst, a growth curve specialist and her many years of experience in business ownership Sue's clients have access to a broad and fresh perspective on issues facing the workforce and its' leaders.

Sue consults with the profit and nonprofit sectors; shaping and training boards, teaching principles that build better teams and develop influential leaders. Sue's areas of special interest and expertise include communication, conflict and confrontation, team dynamics and leadership development. She guides leaders through the strategic planning process to reinforce the importance of the plan, the vision and implementation.

Nothing is more worthy, demanding, frustrating and gratifying than contributing to the health and longevity of an organization than serving as a board member. Sue has experienced it personally and now leverages the knowledge gained by consulting with and advising a variety of boards and leaders.

Sue works with all sectors of the business community in a variety of settings. She recognizes that communication, behavioral strengths, limitations and conflict are universal obstacles that affect even the best of organizations. Sue has the ability to identify the roadblocks and work with the team or individual to develop successful strategies and tactics for a solution. Sue's style is unique – her humor, her direct style and her willingness to laugh at herself allow her to break through barriers to connect with her audience.

Whether Sue is coaching an emerging leader, or helping a CEO see the benefit of investing in their people, Sue brings a level of passion and enthusiasm to her work.
